The Community Alliance with Family Farmers advocates for California family farmers and sustainable agriculture.

1000 growers • 500 businesses • 1 million eaters • 3 decades

Through innovation and advocacy in the field, the market, the classroom, and the statehouse, CAFF provides solutions to environmental, economic and health issues facing our communities.

The Biological Farming program incorporates sustainable and profitable practices to ensure family farmers maintain their livelihood while protecting the community and the environment. The program works directly with farmers to implement environmentally-sound management practices.

The Local Food System program connects communities to the farmers who grow their food. Through innovative partnerships with distributors, retailers, and food service operations, the program inspires hundreds of thousands of California eaters to "Buy Fresh Buy Local."

Farm to School introduces young people to the producers of their food, teaching them about nutrition as well as agriculture's role in environmentally healthy and socially sustainable communities. The program reinforces these lessons by bringing fresh, local food into school cafeterias.

Our Biological Farming, Local Food Systems, and Farm to School programs are bolstered by CAFF's 30 years of work on important Policy issues related to sustaining family farming in California. CAFF is uniquely positioned to respond to emerging issues, such as global climate change, water, and land use.
